Guidelines: The aim of this template is to identify core foresight and innovation/entrepreneurship competences in relation to knowledge, skills and social competences that a future-oriented manager should possess. The source of data for the analysis are key books in the field and the other printed works on foresight and entrepreneurship (even popular-scientific studies) in national languages. Each partner involved in the task (universities) is free to select at least ten articles/books on the subject matter. The partners are also free to add any relevant articles/books. In the first place, we suggest to work on the publications which deal with the convergence among futures studies, entrepreneurship and innovation. In case of difficulty with the identification of core foresight and innovation/entrepreneurship competences in these sources, we suggest to work on the articles/books from three fields of expertise (namely foresight, entrepreneurship and innovation) separately.

Main highlights of the article (in bullets, up to 2500 characters including spaces)	Futures Studies (FS) as an important field when it comes to transformation towards a sustainable world. It is based upon Kreibich's conviction that FS is “scientific research dealing with probable, possible and desirable futures, their developments and design based on the premises of the past and present (Kreibich 1995)” [357] The author lists the various field of FS, its methods as well as the kind of capabilities it can conjure through its process. Kreibich's sees the

He therefore goes into the different areas of sustainable research and methods to link them to FS participatory-process. For Kreibich enhancing future thinking through education will also maximise that sustainable development will succeed.
Other observations or comments	Rolf Kreibich is one of the leading futurist in Germany. His model of FS is well known and often cited.
